THE WAR

TOKYO — Gains up to three miles were punched out along the entire Korean front today by allied troops declared by a high-ranking commander to be "taking the offensive" against fleeing red forces. Counter-attacking Americans recaptured the key hub of Hanju in the east-central sector and chopped off the tip of a communist salient thrust more than 25 miles inside South Korea. United Nations forces in the west drove within reach of the 38th Parallel and erased a red bridgehead northeast of Seoul as they pursued thousands of withdrawing communists. A field dispatch quoted Lt. Gen. Edward M. Almond, 10th Corps Commander, as saying: "The enemy has taken such a beating on our front he is unable longer to sustain the offensive and has been forced to withdraw. When that became apparent I immediately ordered the counter-attack which now is making excellent progress. Today the entire Tenth Corps, in conjunction with the rest of the Eighth Army, is taking the offensive."

WHO IS RUNNING THE WAR?

The more testimony is taken, the more of a Chinese puzzle it becomes who is running the war in Korea against the Chinese Reds.

Nominally, this is a United Nations War; although Uncle Sam has at least nine soldiers there to one for all the other allies together.

But the United Nations appears to have delegated away their authority, in some fields of activity, while keeping it in others.

General MacArthur thought he was running the war for Uncle Sam and the United Nations, but President Truman thought differently, and fired him summarily, with not more than token consultation. What the President did, boiling down the thousands of words of testimony, appears to have been to notify all parties concerned that he was going to fire MacArthur, and dare them to object.

General Marshall clouded the question of who is running our end of the war, rather than shedding light upon it. He talked interminably about the duties of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the Department of Defense, the Secretary of State, and the National Security Council. But it was perfectly obvious that the President and his cronies could and did overrule these various agencies—or tell them in advance what they were supposed to decide, which comes down to the same thing.

Are we to understand that the Korean War is being run by Mr. Truman, as a sort of side show to the Democratic Party? That could be. The Federal judiciary has been a willing wing of the New Deal for years, and the Department of Justice (so-called) punctiliously interprets the laws and its own duties on the basis of what it thinks will produce the most votes and campaign contributions for the Truman Democrats.

There is a slipperiness in the testimony to date which Congress ought to do something about—except that it

He said he hoped to see western folks "before long" and added: "When I get the chance I'll have plenty to tell them."

Santa Ana, Cal.—Authorities said today a new link has been forged in the chain of circumstantial evidence binding Henry Ford McCracken, against whom a murder indictment will be sought Friday in connection with the disappearance of ten-year-old Patricia Jean Hull. They said her story smashed at McCracken's alibi. Patricia was last seen alive walking from a Buena Park movie late Saturday afternoon with a man identified as McCracken.

INTO BEEF CONTROLS

With beef ceilings in effect throughout the country, it is asserted by cattlemen and meat processors that beef quotations 152 per cent of parity are not caused by greed of the cattlemen or the packers or the retailers.

Beef prices are high because America has a high standard of living, and Americans demand increasing quantities of beef, and the best cuts. Prices increased because of the operation of the law of supply and demand. Consumers could have taken the price situation in hand by reducing their purchases.

As for supply, cattlemen had been increasing their herds rapidly because of the attraction of high prices. The government might have augmented the supply by encouraging the importation of cattle. Livestock men would have opposed that step, but it would have had the effect of stabilizing beef prices.

Instead, the government has decided to throw a blanket of controls over the entire beef industry from grass and feedlot to retail sales. Everyone connected with the industry agrees this will lessen the supply, at least the legiti-mate supply. Feeders have decided to reduce their purchases of grass steers. Smaller packers assert they will go out of business rather than operate at a loss. Big packers, already operating to capacity, could not take up that slack in production.

Ranchers will sell their animals at uneconomically light weights, with accent on calves, which are not price controlled. A vacuum will occur in legitimate beef markets which the black mar-keteers will seek to fill.

RUSSIA HAS THE ANSWER

Although developments in the Korean war are based to a considerable extent upon speculation —at least so far as the American public is concerned—there was no doubt for days that the Chinese Reds were preparing for another major drive against U. S. and other forces in South Korea.
American forces took all possible steps to prepare for the onslaught.

There are new reports that the Chinese have a sizable air force in Manchuria, but to date it has not made its appearance over the fighting front.

Regardless of the outcome of the drive, it will certainly have an effect upon Russia's position. If it should succeed, it would seem logical for Russia to jump in to bring decisive victory to communism in the Far East.

If the drive fails, as others in the past have failed, will the Russians then come to the aid of their Chinese comrades and widen the conflict?

As from the beginning of the fighting in Korea, everything depends upon what the Kremlin decides to do. If the Chinese Reds fail of victory in Korea, and Russia does not lend major assistance to them, a stalemate will be in effect.

Who Is Running the War?

already is stymied by the fact the Democratic majority in charge of the investigation consider themselves as Truman partisans first, and as patriots second.

When it suits the convenience of the White House, it is made to appear that the President is simply a sort of chairman of a committee of experts, doing what they agree upon. For example, he and General Bradley were quick to intimate, early in the MacArthur mess, that the decision to fire MacArthur was one made by the Chiefs of Staff.
Yet when this question was brought up by the investigators, and got to be embarrassing, then it suddenly turned out that the advice of the Chiefs of Staff was a highly confidential matter—that the Chiefs were intimate advisers who gave the President private counsel before HE decided such matters.

When things are going well, it is always President Truman who, in line with the theory of civilians dominating the Government, is digesting the flood of information and suggestions provided by the military, diplomatic, economic and other advisers—and making the decisions.

But when things go badly, then he is a Missouri farm boy doing the best he can to carry out the decisions reached by his apparently not-too-competent advisers. That is adroit buck-passing. So far it has stalled off the question of who is responsible for the tragic errors. Whether the voters will keep on swallowing it remains to be seen.

The questions involved, however, go considerably deeper than merely the political issue of whether the American voters are being hoodwinked by the Pendergast boys.

There is the matter of where the United Nations stands.

Here, in the most urgent of all topics, mystery continues. Some of the mystery appears to have been deliberately created. Not all that has been said about the status of U. N. in the Korean War can be true.

General Marshall, who testified at great length, left the impression that United Nations, not being able to meet the practical problems of actually directing the war, delegated its authority to the United States, in the person of President Truman, and then let him name the man to be theatre commander — General MacArthur.

According to this theory, the President thereupon had the right, upon his own initiative, to fire MacArthur and appoint Ridgway. Granting for the sake of argument that he had such a right, technically, was there not still a moral obligation to confer with our partners before so disruptive a step was taken as firing the head of the Japanese occupation forces and the commander of the Korean theatre?

But the President's version begins falling to pieces.
For example, he said a few days ago that he had been thinking of firing MacArthur for a year. Realizing too late that this dated his anti-MacArthur feelings before the Korean War, he modified it through his aides to say that he had been thinking of MacArthur's dismissal ever since some unspecified time last year (1950).

This leaves the President in somewhat of a hole. He submitted MacArthur's name to the U. N. for confirmation. Are we to understand that he did so with private misgivings whether he would not have to fire the man?
And when he came to the conclusion that this was going to happen, some six months or more ago, did he then sound out the United Nations on the question?

Moreover, there continues to be something irreconcilable about the set-up. On a matter so tremendously sensitive as the sudden dismissal of the top man in the Korean and Japanese situation, the President claimed authority to take final action without consultation. Yet in the relatively lesser important "hot pursuit" matter, where the lives of countless American soldiers have been lost because the restrictions on our airplanes has let the Red pilots escape scotfree, the U. S. A. referred to its allies a recommendation supposedly unanimously supported by all American leaders up to and including the President—and let itself be overruled by these others, and allowed the slaughter of its soldiers to continue.

If our allies have the power to overrule President Truman and all his staff on the question of "hot pursuit," why is it that their authority is so limited in the question of theatre commander that it wasn't deemed any of their business (in advance) whether President Truman fired MacArthur or not?

In this country, public thinking is so apathetic on these issues that it makes very little difference what the precise status of the United Nations is. But abroad, where one race after another is on the fence, trying to decide whether to trust what we say, or to judge by what we do, our national attitude towards the United Nations is all-important.

Is it on the up-and-up—or just an international stall?
Is it merely a debating society? Or is it the supreme hope of the world? Is it one of many political alliances—just another "axis" in the troubled world, one of a number of conflicting and overlapping "spheres of influence?"

Or is it simply a publicity stunt, comparable to the late President Roosevelt's "Atlantic Charter" which never existed except in press agents' imagination—a convenient "front" for the Democratic Party, and a handy gadget whereby the Trumanites can handsomely reward their friends here and abroad with high-paid, taxfree jobs?

Four New Red Cross Directors Introduced

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Red Cross held at branch headquarters on Monday, four new directors were introduced by Mrs. D. Barker Cook, chairman of the Bristol district. They are: Mrs. Clyde S. Betts, Sr., Mrs. Va-nuxem Morris, Mrs. William Levinson, and Mrs. Howard Price.

The minutes were read by the secretary, Mrs. James S. Douglass, and Mrs. Thomas Protzman gave the treasurer's report.
In the absence of Miss Frances Landreth, home service chairman, Mrs. Marie Holland told of the work the Red Cross is doing as a link between the servicemen and their families who have financial, marital, or health problems. She stressed the point that the Red Cross does not make the final decision on servicemen's leaves; Red Cross merely investigates, verifies, and sends the information to the field director.
